'Leave Us Alone'

THOUGH he was ostensibly speaking to the Security Last Council on the Middle East crisis last Sunday, Saudi Arabian Ambassador Jamil Baroody's direct appeal to the world's great nations to leave the little countries in peace far transcended matters of such momentary

In his eloquent plea to the "super powers" to stop interfering in the affairs of the small and underdeveloped states Mr. Baroody carefully and deliberately put his finger on what is probably one of the major root causes of world conflict today.

With his anguished entreaty of "leave us alone" Mr. Baroody was speaking not only for the Arabs but for countless millions of Africans and Asians and perhaps even for the Israelis. It would be a grave mistake on the part of the great nations to whom he addressed his remarks to believe otherwise.

For too long the super powers have attempted to direct and shape the destinies of the newly-emerged and underdeveloped nations to their own ends and desires. Much of the so-called generous aid given them has imposed impossible political and economic conditions on peoples whose only desire is to find their own niche in the world and develop their own way

Instead of being allowed to follow this natural course they have had foreign ideologies — political, social and religious — forced upon them.

They have been made to break with many of their old traditions and beliefs in order to conform with what Western man (from both sides of the Iron Cur-

This foisting of Western culture upon these peoples of the Middle East, of Africa and of Asia has brought them little joy. Today many of them are involved in wars or revolutions, the homes of many are shattered and their children dead, while others exist on charity-charity with strings attached.

Has Western man no conscience? If he has he thould listen and listen well to Mr. Baroody's humble supplication: "Leave us alone. What is wrong in being underdeveloped? This is not our era. We have

But if Western man has no conscience then he should in self interest heed Mr. Baroody's warning: 'You are repeating the pattern of power that brought empires down. But this time, with nuclear weapons, you will bring the whole of mankind down.

Those whom the Gods wish to destroy they first

A 'Nut' We Need

ONE CAN readily agree with Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi that the way to achieve a drastic reduction in highway actidents is to clamp down on the impaired driver. He made the assertion in an address to a Calgary Safety Council dinner that Sweden eliminated about 80 per cent of its highway accidents by making drinking driving too expensive with mandatory jail terms and long licence suspensions.

But why, in the same breath, should he denigrate Ralph Nader, the American campaigner for higher mechanical safety standards in cars, whom he described as a nut?

Everyone knows that making cars safer isn't going to make drivers safer, and that drivers, not cars, are responsible for the great bulk of accidents. Mr. Gaglardi apparently believes that Mr. Nader has led the world to believe the reverse, and if this were so he would truly have some cause for concern. He gives the public too little credit for common sense.

But in addition he misses a point of great importance.

It is somewhat similar to the one he persists in sing with regard to speed.

Speed of itself may not cause many accidents. But it makes the results worse when they do occur, a law of physics which Mr. Gaglardi seems unable

And much of Mr. Nader's campaign is not for safety standards that will prevent accidents, but for design features that will reduce the severity of injuries and the number of fatalities that result from traffic mishaps no matter how they are caused. The aim is not merely to cut down the small percentage of highway accidents attributable to mechanical failures; it is to eliminate much of the inside-the-car carnage in accidents of every sort-especially where speed adds to the force of collision.

If this is nuttiness, Mr. Gaglardi may yet have ason to be grateful to a nut. Certainly thousands upon thousands of other motorists will.

Parting the Hair

LONDON hairdresser says that Prince Charles A could go bald if he doesn't change his hair style. It can be said he may well go bald eventually whether he does or not; most men do, in whole or in part, and if Charles escapes he will be a lucky man.

The hairdresser's thesis doesn't seem well founded, however. His argument is that the Prince of Wales parts his hair on the left because, like other males who do this, it is thought to be the correct side for a man. This the barber declares is all wrong; the hair must be combed whichever way it falls.

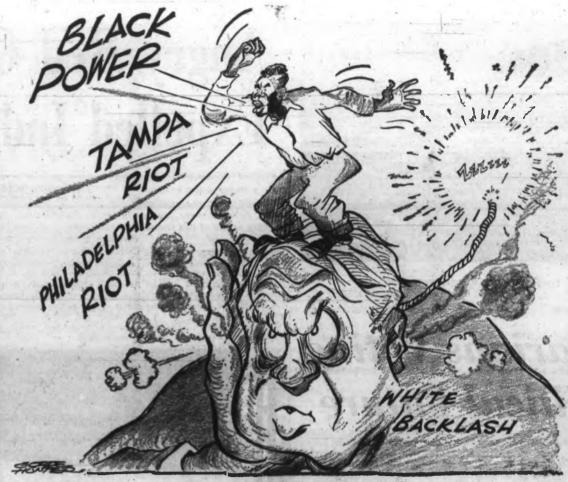

One suspects that males of all shades and opinons part their hair right or left according to their al styling and not because they think one side or the other has priority either of fashion or of

They started their hair-dos, or their mothers did for them, by doing what came natural to the hair. As for any upsetting of nature's fall of the hair the latter has always followed the guidance of the comb, right or left. Once the pattern has been set both the combing and the hair stick to it.

In any case milady puts at naught any idea that the equilibrium can be affected by the side of the parting; she can part her hair in half-a-dozen places, including the centre, and never turn a hair (if the pun can be excused)

But we forget: few women ever go bald, or seem to at least, so milady obviously has an alchemy denied her male contemporaries.

Not many young men, and one supposes certainly not Prince Charles, will pay much heed to the London hairdresser's warning. Right, left, or none at all, what does the parting matter, they will ask.

Election Cheer for the Liberals

BUNCH of the Liberal A "swingers" were laughing it up the other afternoon in the that they've got it yardage.

These are the practitioners of what Prime Minister Pearson has called "the new politics," it activists of his vaunted "wave of youth," who supposedly are thinking up fresh approaches to old problems.

They were gathered there, as they often are, just outside the answer the properties of the answer the conservatives who involving more emotion than plucking by either Liberals or conservative, do you say in any hope of closing the bitterly-divided ranks when you're asked, as you will be by avery campaigning Liberal:

They were gathered there, as these Conservatives who involved the answer the conflictions of all levels with a program of sanity and, at least, although we may not be able to get the U.S. to change its policies, we can speak up and show that we disagree.

How's any Conservative can didate going to answer the plucking by either Liberals or Conservative.

What, as a Conservative, do you say in any hope of closing the bitterly-divided ranks when you're asked, as you will be by every campaigning Liberal: placing facts before his fellow conflictions. They pay dividends the plucking by either Liberals or Conservative.

Tea Versus Love

ON Saturday, June 3, I paid a visit to Willows Park, where a large crowd of people had gathered for a tea party. But, as I stood in the crowd listening to the rock band which was playing, the gathering seemed more like a love-in than a tea party to me. After a few moments thought, I decided that there were a number of differences between the two.

The similarity was only in the size of the crowd and the highpowered music they were listening to. People have criticized love-ins on these points alone, but they accept such things as a tea party. Another point of criticism against love-ins is the claim that people at these gatherings may be using illegal drugs. But an illegal drug was rampant at the ten party on Saturday night — the number of who appeared to be was amazing — and for these people alcohol is as illegal as any other drug contider. any other drug forbidden by

Also on that Saturday night, a few fights broke out; there are no fights at love-ins. Finally, a park after a love-in looks rather like a park before a love-in—clean. After the tea party, Willows looked similar to the city dump. Why then is a tea party acceptable while a love-in—The rates were without an acceptable while a love-in—The rates were without an acceptable with the company of the control of the co party acceptable while a love-in invites letters to the editor invites letters to the editor suggesting that it he held elsewhere if at all? # World Law Only Solution

By SYDNEY HARRIS

I refuse to discuss the Israel-Arab war, in print or in person, because there is nothing to say that makes any sense. We could argue forever, and in circles, about "aggressors"

The plain fact is that it is too late for nations. The world is too small, too packed, and too dangerous for the fierce, rival nationalisms we have today.

If there were no Israel, the Arab countries would be at each other's throats over some other pretext. If Israel "wins" this war, there will still be no hope for equilibrium in the Middle East.

Trying to figure out who was the "aggressor" is like trying to determine who "started" a fight among five little children in a playpen. Actually, there is no single aggressor in such situations.

When the atmosphere is explosive, any slight jar can set off the first blow. But the first blow is never the "cause" of any war. The cause is the rule of anarchy and the absence of law in the world.

People always want to start with "the present." They think this makes them "realists." But it just makes them hopeless muddlers of past, present, and future.

There is no solution in the present, except conflict, victory and subjugation. — followed, in a few years, by conflict, victory and subjugation. And so on, ad infinitum.

The only solution is the establishment of world law, under the jurisdiction of some kind of world government that people will respect and give allegiance to along with their own ent. If we cannot achieve this dual system of loyalites, it doesn't much matter who "wins" or "loses" the current conflict, or the next.

It is as absurd to have all those countries in the Middle East as it would be to have a dozen different countries in the eastern part of Canada or the United States. It makes no sense politically, economically, or socially. But it makes great sense for the rulers of those nations.

The Arabs call it a "holy war" — but all wars are unholy and bring nothing but evil. The Israeli call it "a war of - but no country can survive among hostility, resentment and envy.

The larger nations "deplore" the war and utter sanctimonious statements in favor of peace. But they have provided the little nations with their arms, have sold them airplanes and camons and tanks which they could not make themselves. The "parents" outside the playpen are just as guilty as the children inside for "starting" the fight.

Their arguments apparently carried the day. Nasser and Amer accepted the cease-fire. Sensing that their power base in the army was on the wane, they resigned.

The popular demonstrations have now restored Colonel Nasser. And he has reasserted his position in the army by forcing the resignations of the service chiefs. But among the younger army officers, among those who know how they were out-generalled and out-

OTTAWA (CP)-Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday Canada "will have to particlpate" in accepting Palestine Arab refugees as immigrants if international arrangements can be worked out for the relief of these refugees.

He told the Commons that Canada has already started work with other United Nations members on the problems of the 1,000,000 or more Arabs dis-

Canada would have to take some of them as immigrants as well as part of the financial responsibility in any joint arrangement.

CANADA'S ROLE

The prime minister made the brief reference to possible admittance of the refugees to Canada during a series of questions about Canada's role in seeking a settlement of the Middle Eas situation.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC-Oxford) had asked whether the government would suggest that Israel offer to train the Arabs for resettlement. It should also offer area between Ismailia and Coun, Bell put the stopper on the discussion with his motion to have a full report on accidents in the area presented to the committee.

Another subject of contention, the underground wiring of the new Gorge crossing on Tillicum, was short-lived.

Engineer Gary reported the provincial government had of the wiring underground on the bridge approaches. He recommended the committee drop any plans for putting the wire underground with provincial help.

MATTER DROPPED

The committe agreed to drop the matter, and the wiring program now calls for ducts to be placed under the new bridge, ready for some future under-ground installation of wire, but the wire will be overhead in the

Super-Star Al Kaline? Not to Al!

Only a handful of men in the history of the game could play it any better than he can. Only two players in the league have a higher lifetime batting average. Only one man on the team he plays for ever hit more home runs. He is leading the league in batting, is second in runs-batted-in, and third in homers. He won a batting championship before he could vote. He never spent an hour in the minor leagues.

You would think they'd be measuring Al Kaline for a glass case of his own at Cooperstown. But, alas! He has his detractors. I talked to one of them the other day — an obtuse fellow who is not at all impressed with Al Kaline.

His name is Al Kaline.

In a Hantramck bar, if they didn't know who he was, Al In a Hantramek bar, it they didn't know who be was, Al Kaline would get a black eye for talking that way about Al Kaline. Get a load of this: "I don't think you can class me up with stars like Mays, Mantle, Frank Robinson or Clemente or Aaron," says Al Kaline. "I never did think that much of Aaron," says Al Kaime. "I never in think that much of myself. I know I'm a good player because I get a good salary. But I think I'm just a pretty good player." You had to hit yourself alongside the head to be sure you were hearing right. If Al Kaline is just a "pretty good" player, then a lot of guys in the league who send back signed contracts should be prosecuted for using the mails to defraud. It's like the punch line of the joke about the guy who got caught by his wife coming cut of the bloods's statement. "Who you gonna believe? Me or out of the blonde's stateroom. "Who you gonna believe? Me or your eyes?"

There were only five other players who started this season with 2,000 or more hits. There are only about a dozen in history who hit two home runs in one inning. But people are always willing to take your word for it if you think the least of yourself. If Al Kaline feels he's only a journeyman, pretty soon that'll make it unanimous.

Part of the trouble is, Al Kaline doesn't look like an American League slugger. Pale as a bookkeeper, slender, his collar is a modest size 16, he's un-muscled and looks as if he spent the last 14 years in a monastery, not an outfield. Part of the trouble, too, is the old familiar one - the middle west is just Bridgeport with tornadoes.

"If he played in New York" complained a travelling writer, "they'd run out of ticker tape. But even in Detroit, they turn the conversation around to Mickey Cochrane and Hank

If baseball had a consumer magazine, it would have to sagree. "Style," as we have noted, is a thing difficult to describe but easy to spot. Al Kaline may be the most stylish good hitter since Joe DiMaggio. The swing is as pure and effortless. The contact is as precise as if it had been milled. "Kaline has the best chance of any hitter I've ever pitched against," the pitcher, Bob Lee, once confided. "It's impossible

He doesn't meet the ball with the controlled savagery of a Frank Robinson, or the swift, snake-like wrist-snap of a Henry Aaron. He doesn't have the brute strength of a Mickey Mantle, or the button-porping, cap-losing energetic jump at the ball of a Willie Mays. "He could hit it without losing a monocle," Charlie Willie Mays. "He could hit it without losing a monocle," Charlie Drevsen once observed.

He chokes up on the bat like slap-hitting shortstop. He strikes out fewer "imes than any resident longball hitter in the game. You're surprised when the ball jumps off the bat and over the fence. It's like watching a girl throw a man with judo. The secret is exquisite thining.

He badly needs the exposure of a World Series so that the guys who know baseball only through the office pool won't think "Al Kaline" is a "ype in an antacid ad. But — just as Frank Robinson proved last year — one determined super-star can Robinson proved last year — one determined super-star can mean the permant difference in a closely-bunched league, and Al Kaline may be it. The guy he's got to convince is Al Kaline.

VIEWS of SPORT

as manager of the Cleveland Indians, John Drebinger, poet laureate of the New York Times, fixed his gaze on a point alightly above the horizon and wrote as follows:

We'd never heard of Mayo Smith. We thought Walt Alston was a myth. But now we're really over the barrel --Who in the hell is Kerby Farrell?

Neither John Drebinger nor John Milton having been available for comment on baseball developments over the weekend, a minor league muse was consulted. The result:

From Brooklyn to Chicago, Fans remember Cal McLish; You couldn't hit his curve ball Half as far as a knish. Cal Coolidge did not choose to run, And couldn't hit much, either. When asked if he was pro or con, He always answered, "Neither." Cal Griffith owns a baseball team, The Minnesota Twins, It loses rather frequently.

Though now and then it wins.

Now who the hell's the manager? Some schnook named Calvin Ermer!

Sam Mele is a kindly man - Billy Martin's firmer -

Outside of people named Chance and Kaat and Killebrew and Versalles, the new manager of the Twins has one big thing-going for him. His record as a big league ball player so closely parallels that of Walter Alston it leaves the researcher

Alston, a first baseman, appeared in one game with the Cardinals in 1936, went to bat once against Brooklyn and struck Ermer, a second taseman, appeared in one game with the Washington Senators in 1947, and batted .000. Reference works do not show how many times at bat he needed to compile that Alaton became a playing manager in the minors at the age of 28 and was 42 when he got to the big leagues. Ermer's first joh as a playing manager came when he was 22. Making it to the top now, he is 42.

In his 14th season as skipper of the Dodgers, Alston is the dean of major league managers now employed — in point of uninterrupted service. He may also be the best. At least, he has been the most successful the National League ever had in competition with the American. Four of his six penn Star teams licked the Americans.

If Calvin Coolidge Ermer is looking for a model to pattern himself after, the advice here is to face west Cal Ermer was born in Baltimore Nov. 10, 1924, now lives in Chattanooga. He played minor league ball for eight years and it was Cal Griffith who gave him his first portfolio as

That was in 1947 when he was with the Senators' farm in Charlotte. A few years earlier Cal Griffith has been president and treasurer of the Charlotte club before moving in with his Uncle Clark in Washington. That's about all baseball knows of Cal Ermer, except that he had been running the Twina'
Triple-A farm in Denver the last two and a half years.

Fashions in managers have undergone a change in recent years. In the days of John McGraw and Uncle Wilbert Robinson, it was usually the stars who moved into command as their playing days dwindled down.

There were exceptions like Miller Huggins and Joe McCarthy, of course, but more often than not when an owner went looking for a new manager he turned to the likes of Rogers Hornsby, Frank Frisch, Walter Johnson, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Jimmy Wilson, Gabby Hartnett, Charley Grimm

Then about a decade ago the Alstons and Farrells and Bill Normans began popping up. Maybe the current theory is that a player of limited physical ability has to make up with brains

Dunno, though. A guy who will spend half his life knocking around in those bush leagues, how smart can he he?

A belief in teaching youngsters to learn, rather than merely memorize, is one of the primary objectives of A. I, Isaacson (known better as Lest, principal of Macaulay elementary school. Perhaps the importance of memory work, was empha-sized for him when he was instructing men in Britain's armed services during the Second World War. Then, their lives depended on their self-acquired knowledge.

Born and educated near Cambridge, in England, Mr. Isaacson always wanted to teach, but life's economics made him an accountant prior to the war. He belonged to the militia, and in 1939 found himself in a Warwickshire regiment of the BEF, during the first period of fighting in Europe.

His regiment was one of those brought off the beach at Dunkirk, and he's still proud the regiment made it home, half of his platon was brought back. His memories are vivid of a tiny boat the Saucy Sal, crewed by one old man and a 14-year-old boy: and of German planes strafing everything in sight, and of an RN destroyer being sunk almost in the Saucy Sal's

Mr. Isaacson, a corporal then, next became a Comferred to the RAF to win his pilot's wings and a commis-sion within six months.

Following operational flights, he was sent to Patricia Bay on a navigational course, which he also instructed.

It was while at Pat Bay, in 1943 and 1944, that he met end married his wife, and she returned with him to England for seven years. Now he was able to turn to teaching, taking his training in London and spending five years in Cambridge, where he also played and became known as a referee in soccer.

In 1951 he returned to Victoria, teaching and looking after sports at Oak Bay high for a year.

He became vice-principal at Quadra in 1954, and was named principal, at Macaulay

For some time here he continued his active interest In socoer, both as a referee and as a league official. The was interested grew from 13 to 70 teams.

people have had a look over the property

But the date June 15 was chosen for the official opening as that is the exact day 100 years ago that Cornelius O'Keefe came to the district. At the time, June 1867, Cornelius O'Keefe was driving 180 head of cattle up from Oregon headed for the riches Believed to be the only one of B.C.'s early cattle empires still held by the original family, the O'Keefe.

Ranch has been fully restored to its 19th century condition as a private centennial project of the present day O'Keefe's, Cornelius' son, Tierney and his wife Betty.

A short time ago on the Blue Water Tour sponsored by B.C. Tourist Association and Lines we were taken to visit the Vernon ranch.

* * * The restoration all started with the little church of St. Ann, the first Roman Catholic church in the Interior, so Betty O'Keefe told us.

Evidently people heard about the church which was in delapidated state. And people came to see the church, so the idea was born to restore the building which stands near to the ranch mansion.

The family home, The Man sion as it always has been called, is worth the visit. Tierney O'Keefe, who showed us around his home, told us he didn't know exactly why but the place was always called The Mansion even as it was being built. Tlerney is a son of founder, Cornelius.

The furnishings inside the Mansion, most of them the originals, are a collector's dream. In the drawing room is a grand plano that once lived in a German consulate.

The delicate, sea-green chandelier of hand-blown Venetian glass was one of the original furbishings. So was the tapestry settee set.

The dining room is probably the most dramatic and eye catching. A glittering, Belgian lead crystal chandelier which Tier-ney O'Keefe restored himself hangs over an enormous oak table covered with a Belfast pattern sterling flatware (for a nine course dinner). The beautiful Meissen dinner service has only one equal, and it belonged to the late Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany.

Around the plate rail are Royal Doulton plates and I saw cranberry crystal and a Tierney O'Keefe let us hear music from the solid mahog-

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen.
Thomas Dodd (D—Conn.) in an emotional appeal to his colleagues against censure charges, swore Wednesday he was telling the truth in declar ing his innocence.
"May the vengeance of God strike me down otherwise," he Raising his right hand, his booming voice filling the Chamber, Dodd said, "I swear now and I will swear forever. I am telling the truth. ALMOST SHOUTED

"I am telling you the truth," he almost shouted. "If I had to face my Maker right now—I'm telling you the truth."

The 60-year-old, silver-haired senator saved for the finale of his defence his evangelical declaration of innocence.

It was a departure from his prepared text, which consisted of a point-by-point denial of charges that he misused political and double-billed for travel expenses. Consure would force his resignation.

I LOOKED ABOUND His voice rising to a crescendo that echoed through the Senate, Dodd finished reading his 17page text, and slowly looked round at his colleagues.

"I've talked with you, I've walked among you, I've lived with you more than eight years. "Does anyone of you know that I have ever lied to you? That I ever cheated? That I have done any dishonorable thing? That I have ever given you my word and done some-thing else?"

NO ONE ROSE Calling down the wrath of heaven as proof he was not lying, Dodd then shouted: "Is there any here who say I lied? Get up! If I lied . . . if I cheated you . . . get up and say so!"
No one got up.
Dodd reminded them he had paid back money involved in what he said was inadvertent double billing for travel expenses, then said:

"But that doesn't do much for me. What's more important by million miles is that you don't believe that I'm a common sneak-thief, a petty larcener, a pickpocket, a crook."

Pickle Eaters Warned

TORONTO (CP)-Three Van couver doctors have found pickle eaters have a predisposi-tion to ulcers and a kind of gastritis associated with cancer, the Canadian Medical Asso eiation Journal reports.

Drs. W. C. MacDonald, F. H. Anderson and S. Hashimoto of the University of British Colum-bia and Vancouver General Hospital have found highly salted soy sauce pickles and sweet vinegared gherkins can produce abnormalities of the stomach lining, the magazine

The doctors used a suction method to retrieve pieces of stomach lining from three male subjects and found marked changes in their cells after the men consumed 30 ounces of fukujinzuke, a Japanese dish containing assorted vegetables in soy sauce, or vinegared gheridus over a three-day

The doctors say the death rate from gastric cancer and gastric ulcer is higher in Japan than in Canada or the United States and Japanese, who migrate to other countries, main-tain a high death rate from stomach cancer.

It was found many Japanese milk and dairy products and more pickled and salted food than other Canadians.

Work Sincere

By INA D. D. UHTHOFF Would Sophie Deane-Drum-Canada's leading portrait

That is what visitors to the exhibition of her work being held at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria until Sunday are asking themselves.

The size and handling of the figure pieces that are, and have been, an attraction hanging in the hall of the Spenser Mansion are a source of wonderment to many, particularly to those who are too young to remember the gracious days, and ways of the past, the days when houses were planned with drawing rooms and halls suitable for family portraits to be hung in.

The fashionable portrait painter was then a most important person, with a handsome income earned from commissions and a large circle of admiring friends.

But there has always been the other side, the obscure genius too poor to be able to afford canvas and paint, like, let us say, Emily Carr.

It is an interesting point to remember that Sophie Deane Drummond and Emily Carr. both native Victorians, studied art at the same time in San Francisco and at the same school.

DESTRUCTION

Both were determined to make painting their life's work, the first as a portrait painter working a long conventional lines, the other in rebellion against the academic teaching of the times.

It is very difficult for the artist surrounded by the lux-uries of life to become really great. Art demands too much of

Of course it has been don but it is only a completely dedi-cated painter who can rise above the temptations of an easy life to sacrifice it for a life can mean.

SINCERITY In Mrs. Deane-Drums work I respond more readily to the sincerity of the small portrait study, Armeen, than to the technical mastery shown in the large canvases like Un large canvases Livre Ouvert, though this type of painting was much in favor

Yesterday we were discussing the chemical control of weeds, and more particularly, how to apply weedkiller solution to your lawn weeds without poisoning your nextdoor neighbour's pet

As I mentioned yesterday, I distrust any kind of a gadget or applicator that delivers the 2-4-D solution in the form of a fine, misty spray, for it doesn't take much of a breeze to carry such a mist out of bunds and into someone else's garden. I don't like those hose-end sprayers for this job either, although I think they are wonderful for other garden uses.

I don't like those little hand-pump sprayers such as are used for killing flies and mosquitos in the home, and I have as especially strong dislike for knapsack pneumatic sprayers which are pumped up beforehand and slung over the shoulder on a strap. With these, there is always a tendency to hold the lance nozzle too high, to get a wider coverage of the spray, for the danger to neighbouring plants increases with every foot the nozzle is held off the Manufacturers have been making things easier for us lately by eliminating the laborious pumping-up of spray tanks and supplying us with readymixed aerosols — just push the little red button on top and you're in business. How do these fit into the weedkilling picture?

Originally, the weedkiller aerosol had all the disadvantages of the pneumatic and the hose-end sprayers - the droplets were too fine and misty and therefore too subject to drift. However, someone came up with the bright idea of making the stuff come out as a foam, like soapsuds, rather than as a fine misty spray.

This workd very well indeed. Moreover, the foam persists for some time on the leaves of a treated weed, so you can see just which ones were squirted and which were not. I have used these foaming weedkiller aerosols on weeds within 18 inches of susceptible plants without visible damage.

Another safe applicator is the Killer

Kane, a hollow plastic tube something like a thick walking stick; you fill the tube with weedkiller solution, then stroll across the lawn pressing the foot of the cane down on each weed encountered. This year's model, incidentally, is vastly improved over the earlier Killer Kane - easier to fill, for one thing, and a in the foot that releases the droplets of weedkiller. I have mentioned the Weedex Wonder Bar in previous articles dealing with the dog problem. This is a heavy bar or "log" of wax impregnated with weedkiller, and it is dragged by two cords across the lawn. Some of the wax rubs off on the weed leaves, killing them most effectively. I had a few reports of fume damage to nearby plants when the bar first came on the market, but I think the manufacturers. must have eliminated the bugs, for I have heard no complaints now for several years. There are two unique advantages in this form of weedkiller. First, because the chemical is in wax, it doesn't wash off in the rain. Second, the strong smell of 2-4-D seems to be distasteful to dogs, and in my experience dogs won't visit treated lawn until the odor wears off. T don't think the manufacturer has ever claimed any dog-repellent power for his product, but it is there nevertheless

Before leaving this subject, I should mention once again the new fertilizers fortified with granular weedkilling chemicals. With these, you feed and weed the lawn all in one go, and the stuff is safe to use even quite close to garden plants.

ART BUCHWALD Tapes Hussein, Nasser

Well, Nobody's Perfect'

WASHINGTON-It was reliably reported last week that Israel listened in on telephone conversations between President Nasser and King Hussein while the war was going on. This, of course, was a viola-tion of the Middle East antibugging laws and we can expect the Soviet Union to bring it up in no uncertain terms at the United Nations.

While the Israelis published one such conversation that they heard, there were others that took place during those four fateful days.

I heard the tape of one the other day, and while I can't swear to its authenticity, it certainly sounded like Namer and Hussein to me.

It went like this: Husseln: "Gamal, my what the hell have you done Jerusalem, Bethlehem and all Nasser: "Well, nobody's to do, my tiny sovereign. If Nasser: "Little King, do not despair. There is still much we can do."

Hussein: "Such as what, O Mighty Prophet of the Sinai?"

point of view of the mental and emotional processes of the individual. And yet, most of us fail to ealize that psychology, after all, is based principally on the relationships of parents to children and children to parents. We forget that virtually every known human relationship is but an extension of our experiences within the family.

And so we continue to adhere to a philosphy of family life which, in the name of modern psychology, accentuates asociality and disconinuity.

This prevailing doctrine has been so successful in overemphasizing the importance of the private world of the individual that he now acts as if he believed that he no onger needed a family at all! Far from leading to our human emancipation, these new teachings shackle us to our own raw hides -- the conflicting world of our pas sions and desires transpose the role of parents, so that before children ever learn how to be children they are already functioning as if they were fathers and

The result is no real family, just as there is no real community.

Instead of parents allowing love to function as moral responsibility clothed in ender affection, and children willingly permitting it to be expressed in the form of dutiful reverence, in effect the generations have switched important feeling of continuity; they were the vitalwhereby the means present, and future

This significant "identity formation" was derived from the family experience; it helped to fit the rising generation for its future role in a to reproducing itself in the life of its young.

"Growiny up" meant ba-coming "socialized," and was not merely equated, as we seem to do, with finding outlets for satisfying sails fulfillments.

Our families seem never work at the job of producing adults out of children, for in our zeal to sanctify their own private worlds as empires not be invaded by adult standards of moral responsibility, we are denying our children one of the benefits of family life achievement of a socialized personality,

As a result, young people grow into a world with their private, personal ambitions as their paramount goals and increasingly refuse to follow a direction which would involve them too deeply in the wider society. Private lives are not enough, simply because there is not enough of oneself "to go around." We need to relate to the world, and when we open up our lives to the world, in the laboratory of our homes, we become bigger than we could ever have been before.

ROBINSON S S07 Broad St.

By ROBIN JEFFREY

According to UPI's Rick Du Brow, the U.S. National Educational Television network is planning a Sunday night news program which is "being encouraged to stir

"Your channel selector's worm out. You've been switching back and forth between Johnny Carson and Joey Bishop, Right?"

To be called the Public Broadcast Laboratory, the show, says its director, Av Westin, "is a virtually autonomous unit of NET . . . it is funded separately from NET by the Ford Foundation . we are responsible to very strong editorial board . . . that board has set itself the task of encouraging us to rock the boat and of protecting and insulating us from pressure when we do."
Sounds a bit like the Seven Days and Sunday style of show, doesn't it? Unlike Seven Days and Sunday, however the Laboratory will have no fixed length. It will run as long as it feels is necessary to cover the news of a par ticular week. Westin believes broadcast journalism gan "put forth points of view; that balance among points of view should be achieved neross the entire 2 broadcasts in each sea son's series and not automatically in each bland broadcast.' He concluded: "The time has come for us to put an end to what I call music-up-and-under documentaries in which, as we head into the final commercial, we are reminded that there is a problem and certainly something ought to be done about it-but, please, don't ask what." Next thing, they'll be signing Douglas Lelterman and face my Maker right now—I'm telling you the truth."

The 60-year-old, silver-haired senator saved for the finale of his defence his evangelical declaration of innocence.

It was a departure from his prepared text, which consisted of a point-by-point denial of charges that he misused political funds and double-billed for travel expenses. Censure would force his resignation.

His voice rising to a crescende that echoed through the Senate, Dodd finished reading his 17-

"Does anyone of you know that I have ever lied to you"

That I ever cheated? That I have done any dishonorable thing? That I have ever given you my word and done some-thing else?"

Calling down the wrath of heaven as proof he was not lying, Dodd then shouted: "Is

Pickle Eaters Warned

TORONTO (CP)-Three Vanouver doctors have found pickle eaters have a predisposition to ulcers and a kind of gastritis associated with cancer, the Canadian Medical Asso ciation Journal reports.

Drs. W. C. MacDonald, F. H. Anderson and S. Hashimoto of the University of British Columbia and Vancouver General Hospital have found highly sailed soy sauce pickles and sweet vinegared gheridas can produce abnormalities of the stomach lining, the magazine says.

The doctors used a suction method to retrieve pieces of stomach lining from three male aubjects and found marked changes in their cells after the men consumed 30 ounces of fukujinzuke, a Japanese dish containing assorted vegetables in soy sauce, or vinegared gheridas over a three-day period.

The doctors say the death rate from gastric cancer and gastric ulcer is higher in Japan than in Canada or the United States and Japanese, who migrate to other countries, maintain a high death rate from stomach cancer.

It was found many Japanese Canadians eat less bread, meat milk and dairy products and more pickled and salted food than other Canadians.

That will be a special hidden weight prize for youngsters, 16 years of age and under, who enter trout or small-mouth bass into the King Fisherman Contest in May and June. Be sure to mark the age on entry forms.

Each fish entered will mean another chance for the trip.

Indications are fishing will be grod. Three trout in the four-pound class and two 3.12-pounders are entered from Nahmint Lake today.

Neighborhood Too Small For Dog War

The private war of Tex and Duke came to central magistrate's court Tuesday, moving Magistrate William Ostler to observe: "The simple truth is that the neighborhood is not big enough for both dogs."

Tex is a German shepherd owned by William Moore of 0 Dorset. Duke is also a German shepherd, owned by David Ward, a neighbor of Mr. Moore.

The Crown asked the court to find that Tex was a ficious dog, a request that was rejected by the magistrate. But it took two hours to reach that decision. In between, there were 12 color pictures showing how Mr. Ward exercised his dog, a long explanation by both neighbors about the unpleasantness that existed between the Defence counsel Kenneth Murphy sought to show two films in the courtroom, one showing Tex's friendly association with people and the other of the Ward dog walking back and forth in front of the Moore property.

FUND DRIVES MERGED

By A. H. MURPHY

Months of negotiations were successfully concluded Wednesday with the announcement that the Victoria divisions of the Red Cross and Community Chest will unite this autumn in a common drive for funds.

The announcement was made jointly by William Lewis, Red Cross president, and Graham McCall, Community Chest chief. Consolidation of the two organizations was recommended recently by Mayor Hugh Stephen and the reeves of adjacent municipalities. A series of meetings was held in which it was agreed the joint drive will be known as the "United Red Feather-Red Cross
